

September 9, 2009- Tallgrass Technology Partners, LLC is pleased to announce the completion of two deals for clients in the past three months.

The first was the signing of a research option on a patent portfolio invented and developed by Dr. William E. Marshall for “Oligoribonucleotides alert the immune system of animals to the imminence of microbial infection” to one of the world’s largest animal health companies (because of confidentiality agreements we are unable to disclose the name of the company). Currently, the technology is in animal trials and is expected to be in the marketplace in 2010.

The second was a distribution agreement signed with HelioHealth.com and Pain Management Technologies, Inc. on the BAUD (Bio Acoustical Utilization Device) a product invented and developed by G. Frank Lawlis, Ph.D. This product is expected to be available in 2010.

Commenting on the deals, Bruce A. Benteman, President and Operating Member, stated, “We are excited that our team has been able to secure these deals for our client’s. In both cases, our clients not only have the opportunity to see their products commercialized, but to also have significant financial upside. With several additional products in negotiations for licensing deals, we are seeing that our professional and ethical approach of commercializing patented technologies does work. Even in this most trying of economic times we are seeing that companies in industries across the board are actively seeking new product and technology opportunities.”
